

Zoo trip broadens student horizons

AVEVA Singapore colleagues accompanied over 30 special needs students to the local zoo to help them develop their knowledge of animals and to connect the classroom with the world beyond its walls.

The colleagues joined teachers from the Association for Persons with Special Needs (APSN) Katong School to visit Singapore Zoo, where they guided students and talked about the animals as they journeyed around the enclosures.

At the end of the visit, a colleague vividly brought the visit to life for the students as he talked about what they had encountered during their tour before returning to the school to learn more about its approach.

Action for Good provides an extraordinary opportunity to do something amazing in the community. As one colleague observed: "Action for Good drives better business sustainability and employee engagement. Employees go out of their comfort zone, develop better empathy and improve teamwork in the process."

"It was an eye-opener for all to see first-hand how the school environment and curriculum are structured to set these kids up for self-sustainability when they reach adulthood."
